To the RVBC,

If you have any sense whatsoever then you cannot possibly allow the proposed development of the Grammer School's land into 100 houses to go ahead. I have been a resident of Clitheroe my entire life, going to school here and currently working here. With the current Standen development already in production, I ask the RVBC if they plan to build another school or perhaps expand the medical center to meet the demands of Clitheroe's rapid expansion. I understand the need for growth. I understand the need to generate money for our town to prosper. However, I also understand basic logic and if the RVBC carries on the way they are doing regarding the rapid building of tacky suburban housing in recent years, they will soon have a serious problem on their hands.

We are not any other town; Clitheroe is highly individualistic and what a shame it would be to lose that for profit's sake. If the RVBC continues to allow expansion, they must face the task ahead of them as opposed to burying their heads in the sand and causing serious issues years down the line. My opinion is not formed out of small minded nostalgia for the town I grew up in (as many are), but out of the pure pragmatism of a realist. I trust some members of the RVBC are realists also? For those who are not, I suggest they find something better to do with their time which I am sure is oh so precious.

Kind regards,

[REDACTED] resident.
